

MILWAUKEE CONVENTION INDORSED NO CANDIDATES; CONNOR STATE CHAIRMAN

Platform Commends Administration of Pres. ident Taft--Ringing Speeches for Party Loyalty.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 8.—With the election of W. D. Connor as chairman of a new state Republican committee, consisting of two members from each congressional district, the state Republican convention closed at noon today. No effort was made to endorse any candidates for office, and the platform which was adopted praises the administration of President Taft.

Platform Adopted.

The platform says in part: "We are inspired by a desire to perpetuate our party as a political organization and to restore to the members of the party the rights and opportunities of party government. We adhere to the principles of the Republican party as outlined in the platform adopted by the Republican National convention of 1908. We commend the administration of William H. Taft; we admire his character; we recognize his marked ability as a statesman, and we applaud his fidelity to the pledges contained in the party platform and to the principles of good government. To the end that our party may be maintained, high ideals upheld, and party efficiency secured, frequent and regular party councils should be held, and if necessary party committees and officers should be appointed whose duty it shall be to provide for a reorganization of the party throughout the state, and as may be necessary to accomplish such ends."

Keynote Party Solidarity.

Representatives of all shades of opinion have been stirred to a high pitch of enthusiasm by the great gathering. That the convention has more than accomplished its purpose and that a new page has been turned in Wisconsin political history is the conviction of those who sponsored the movement.

Senator John M. Whitehead is quoted as saying: "The ringing speeches of yesterday struck a new note of lofty patriotism and they were good to hear for the long regime of factional bickering. Ex-Governor Howard, W. D. Connor, M. G. Jeffris, Vice President Sherman, Ex-Congressman James E. Watson of Indiana, Levi Hammeroff and the others all caught the crowd and held them because each had a message to deliver."

The following excerpts from some of the addresses will be read with interest by every Republican voter:

EXTRACTS FROM SPEECHES.

HOARD USED AS TEXT—
ANECDOTE RELATED BY LATE JUDGE CONGER

Ex-Governor William H. Hoard of Jefferson in his address to the convention said in part:

"We are at a critical juncture in the political history of our state and nation, and one that calls for a very large amount of common sense. (Applause.)"

"The late Judge Conger of Iowa told me a story to me. He said 'I was a Whig member of congress from the Central district of New York. I was flooded with a tremendous amount of the importance of my own opinion. I did not always vote with the Whigs and one day when the Democrats, as usual, were voting "Yes," I voted "No." A Dr. Robinson, whose seat was near me, seated in a chair, piping voice, "Why, you're opposed to a d—n sight more than you're in favor of."

"That is a dangerous state of mind. It is a destructive and not a constructive state. My creed is a very simple one. I don't want to include a whole lot of questions I cannot myself solve, and I hope you will not include a whole lot of issues you cannot settle."

"I have a supreme faith in the great heart of the Republican party—a supreme faith in the rectitude of its intentions. In the statehood of it has and will today evolve and a supreme faith in the honesty, ability and patriotism of our great leader, William Howard Taft."

"Any man who believes for a moment he is at the head of a vested interest finds that belief triumphantly answered in the injunctions just taken out against the railroad companies. What more conclusive proof could any president give that he stands for a square deal?"

"I hope you'll blow a bugle note here to be heard in the remotest portion of our heritage, so simple and conclusive that the commonest man can grasp it. Do not attempt to lift off a confounded sight more than you can chew! It's enough, in your declaration to annihilate your adherence to the solemn pledges of the Republican party at its last national convention, which promises you will vigorously adhere to and fulfill. That is enough—do not enter into partisanship. Stay by the purposes of this conference as enunciated in its call, and you'll find coming to you the hungry hearts of the Republicans of Wisconsin—hungry for doctrines which can be executed."

"Rhetoric, invective and sarcasm have no business here. A sober, plain, simple, direct enunciation of what you believe, and what Time has justified you in believing should justify you on this occasion."

DIFFERENCES INEVITABLE BUT MAJORITY MUST RULE— VICE PRESIDENT SHERMAN

"We are now confronted again by insurmountable in the party, though it is by no means a united movement, as it may be said that there are nearly as many kinds of insurmountable as there are insurgents. I believe, however, that the strength of the regular Republican party will in no way be weakened, but that it will go to the polls next November and record a victory and again be successful when it votes for its candidate for president in 1912."

"It is not a matter of surprise that in a country of such vast domain; such wide territorial boundary and with such diversified interests as can be found from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the lakes to the Gulf, the members of a great and dominant party should not always be in perfect accord regarding every act of legislation. It has been the strength of the Republican party that leaders in thought and judgment and wisdom have been among its members. It is so today as it has been since 1856 and 1860."

"I believe that with the people's better understanding of the real purposes and interest of our great and sincere president, who is striving with all the energy which he possesses to keep the promises made by himself and his party; I believe with truth and facts have displaced falsehood and fiction, people, not only in Wisconsin, but throughout the United States, will give their hearty indorsement to that party which has during all these years stood like a bulwark for liberty, for honor and progress."

HON. JAMES E. WATSON:

"Divisions may come, but the Republican party moves on. I am not here to abuse insurgents. This is a government by parties and cannot be governed in any other manner—the only rule is the rule of the majority."

The old Republicanism kept on shining when Salmon P. Chase of Ohio, the first insurgent, left it in 1868. It shone with undiminished lustre when Schuyler and Curtis left in 1881, and in 1896, when Teller and Dubois and the 10,000 silver Republicans went out, and again, when the anti-imperialists broke away, the Republicanism still shone on, all unconcerned of these desertions. There may be a lesson here for some insurgents of the present day."

CHAIRMAN LEVI H. BANCROFT:

"The era of personal politics in America began with the personal campaign of Bryan in the democratic convention of 1896. The next year, the surrender of a great political organization, once magnificent in its loyalty and conservatism under circumstances of defeat and popular distrust, resulted in the absolute demoralization of the democratic party; and what was once a splendid and uplifting political power, holding in check the radicalism of the militant majority, has become a pitiful and degenerate tramp, wandering aimlessly between socialism and insurgency under the banners of the apostles of unrest."

EMANUEL L. PHILIPP:

"Let party politics be determined by majorities in public conventions. Let provision be made that the records and accounts of the party be accessible at all times to every citizen of the state. Let it be made possible for aspirants for public office to present their claims for recognition to duly accredited representatives of the Republican party to engage in an unassuming, unassuming, unassuming and final to self-respect, if they shall hope to succeed at the primaries."

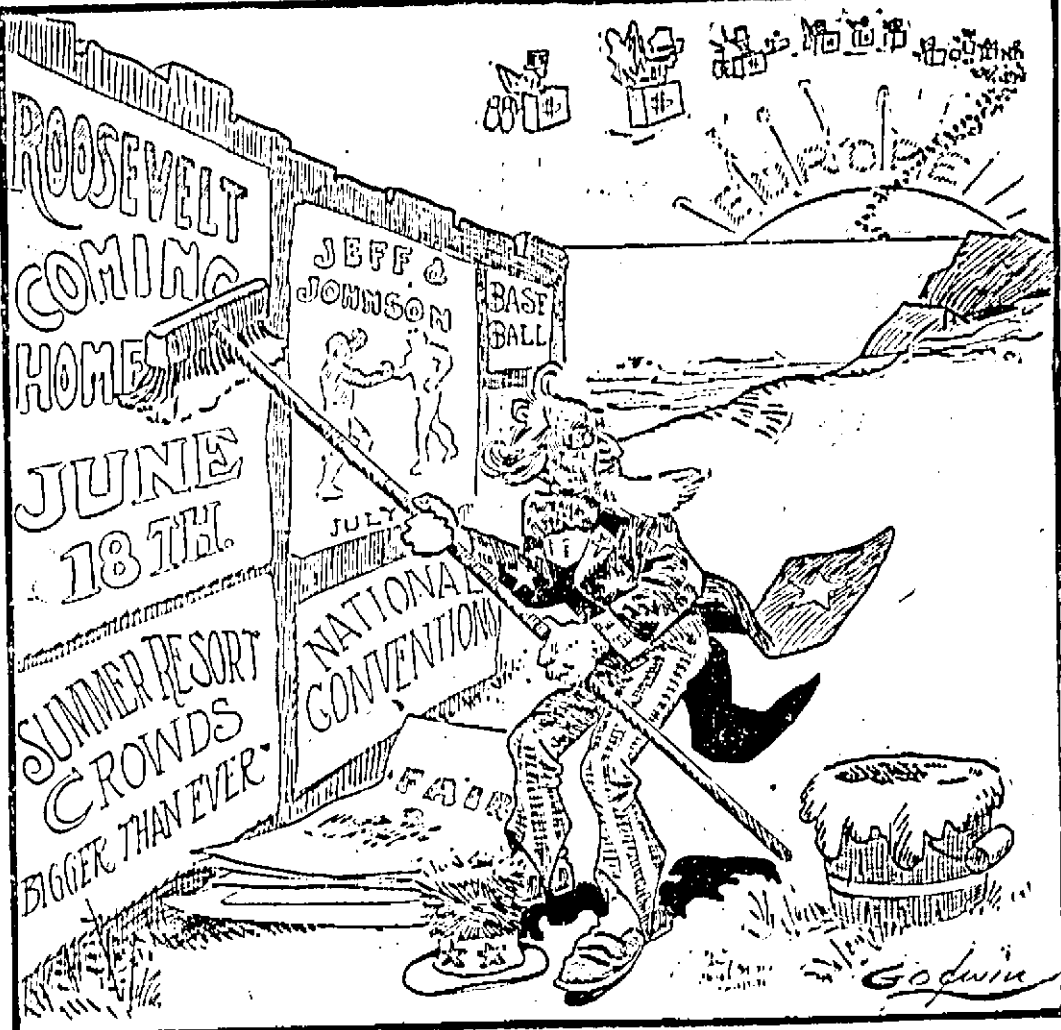

W. D. CONNOR:

"There is no place in Republican politics in this country for the individual to set himself up above the party organization and the wish of the majority of that party. Personal interests and personal differences, the success of any individual, should be cast aside, lost sight of, in the general aim, in the general desire, for success of the Republican party in Wisconsin."

M. G. JEFFRIS:

"We hear criticisms of the tariff bill. I am not here to talk tariff, but I will say that we never had, never can have a tariff bill that will please everyone. No tariff bill ever pleased 500 men gathered together to discuss it. I venture to say that if this conference were called upon to frame a tariff bill there would be wide differences of opinion on many schedules."

HOME-COMING OF COL. ROOSEVELT

1,000 Of New York's Foremost Citizens, War Veterans And Rough Riders Are Arranging Welcome

New York, June 8.—When Theodore Roosevelt lands in New York a week from next Saturday he will receive an ovation from his friends and admirers of this and many other States which promises to eclipse any similar demonstration ever beheld in the metropolis. The general arrangements for the reception are in charge of a committee of which Cornelius Vanderbilt is the chairman and which includes in its membership nearly one thousand of the foremost citizens of the State and City of New York.

Information received by this committee indicates that great throngs are coming from distant States to join in the vociferous welcome to the former President. The rough riders and the Spanish War Veterans will have a prominent part in the day's doings, but that they are not to monopolize the demonstration is evidenced by the fact that numerous other patriotic and patriotic organizations, trade bodies and societies of various kinds are preparing to take part in the affair. The organizations of foreign born residents of New York will be much in evidence, including the German, Polish, Italian, French, Greek, Syrian and Japanese clubs. Railroads have made reduced fares for the occasion, many special trains have been ordered and organizations and individuals from the North and South, the East and West are arranging to join in the grand reception. New York hotels, which at least are crowded at this season of the year with the elite and flow of the early summer excursion tide and tourists bound for Europe, are already besieged with applications for quarters, and the restaurants and cafes along the Great White Way are counting upon receiving a harvest during the few days preceding and following Mr. Roosevelt's arrival home.

One of the objects of the convention is to boom the country's prosperity and give expression to the general satisfaction with existing business conditions. It is estimated that fully fifteen thousand traveling men from all parts of the State have invaded New York and that, as well as the thousands located in New York City and vicinity will take in the grand "prosperity parade" which will form the principal feature of the program for next Saturday. The parade, which is to include nearly fifty industrial and allegorical floats, and will be accompanied by scores of music bands, will start from the Battery and march northward through the principal streets of the business district of Manhattan. KNOWLEDGE OF FOOD

Proper Selection of Great Importance in Summer.

The feeding of infants is a very serious proposition, as all mothers know. Food must be used that will easily digest, and the undigested parts will be thrown into the intestines and cause sickness.

It is important to know that a food can be obtained that is always safe; that is Grape-Nuts.

A Texas mother writes: "My baby took the first premium at a baby show and is in every way a prize baby. I have fed him on Grape-Nuts since he was five months old. I also use your formula for myself."

Grape-Nuts food is not made solely for a baby food by any means, but is manufactured for all human beings.

One special point of value is that the food is partially predigested in the process of manufacture, not by any drugs or chemicals whatsoever, but simply by the action of heat, moisture, and time, which permits the starch into dextrin, a portion of which is further changed to dextrase or grape-sugar. This presents food to the system ready for immediate assimilation.

Its special value as a food, beyond the fact that it is easily digested, is that it supplies the needed elements to quickly rebuild the cells in the brain and nerve centers throughout the body.

Read the little book, "The Road to Well-being," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

BOARD SAYS COUNTY JAIL IS TOO SMALL

Board Of Control Has Informed Green Co. Supervisors That County Jail Should Be Enlarged.

Monroe, Wis., June 9.—The State board of control has advised the Green county board of supervisors that the jail here is too small in which to confine drunks, tramps and other city prisoners and recommended that a city lock-up for this class of inmates be constructed. The board states that the jail is not large enough and that either a proper place for the detention of tramps and city prisoners must be constructed or the jail enlarged by the addition of a proper department. The board of control also advised that the building at the county asylum, which houses the male insane patients, be condemned and a modern structure replace the old building. The advice was given upon recommendation of Dr. Friday of the board, who inspected the institution.

The last time it took the horse ran into the chain on the north side of the court house smashing the dashboard and leaving the wagon at the chain while it jumped over and ran around the court yard.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

THERE is one weakness that it seems to me if I were training a child, I should try to help him to grow up without—and that is the weakness of inaccurate statement.

The famous Dr. Johnson is reported to have said: "If the child says he looked out of this window when he looked out of that—why him."

I certainly should not advise any such strenuous measures as that, but I do think it is a good thing to make a decided effort to teach a child the habit of accurate and exact statement.

"Teach him not to be specific unless he can be accurate; not to say, 'I walked four miles,' or 'I came home at five o'clock,' unless it was exactly four miles or five o'clock."

Teach him if he is only speaking broadly to say "about," or "somewhere near," or any word or expression that denotes approximately.

And, above all things, try to keep him from acquiring that painfully prevalent, slipped habit of exaggeration.

The famous boy who told his father he had seen "about a hundred cats scurrying down in our cellar," and then admitted, after a few searching questions, that after all, he was only sure of "our cat and another one," has altogether too many prototypes not only in boy life, but also among grown-ups.

How many people's statements you take with a grain of salt!

"She told me she cleaned every closet and every drawer and cupboard in the house, and changed the paper on all the shelves, and washed all the china yesterday, but I don't believe her."

"He says he is getting just twice as much money as he was last year at this time, but I guess if you take ten dollars off of that you will get nearer the truth."

I hate exaggeration. If you have the habit of exaggeration people will soon find you out, and then in self-defense will acquire a compensatory habit of deducting from your statements. Often they will deduct more than they ought. So everyone loses.

"It is vinegar to the eyes," says Emerson, "to deal with men of loose and imperfect perceptions."

Train your children to accuracy of thought and observation and statement, and you will have given them an equipment that will prove most valuable in all the relations of life.

FUNERAL OF FORMER EVANSVILLE WOMAN

Services for Mrs. Mary Gibbs Who Died in Evansville, Saturday, Held Tuesday in Cut-off City.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Evansville, June 8.—Mrs. Mary E. Gibbs, for many years an honored resident of Evansville, prior to her death at seventy-three years of age, died at her home here last Saturday morning. At the home of her daughter, Mrs. Theo. Travis, in Evansville, Ill., funeral services were held in that city Monday afternoon and the remains were brought here Tuesday noon and conveyed to the home of her son, Albert Gibbs, where services were held in the afternoon at half past two o'clock, conducted by Rev. A. L. Whitcomb of Edgerton. The remains were accompanied here by her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Travis, and their daughter, Miss Beulah Travis, J. R. Williams, a son-in-law, and a granddaughter, Mrs. Dr. Stanley of Brookville, Mo. The deceased was 81 years of age and her death was due to complications of illness. She came to Evansville in the early '90s and resided in this city continuously until nineteen years ago when she went to Evansville to reside in the home of her daughter. She leaves two sons, Alfred and Albert, both of this city, and numerous other relatives. Burial was made in the family lot in Maple Hill. Her husband, who died thirty-eight years ago, rests there.

THE EGOTISM OF GREAT NATURES.

By MARY HUNSELL.

The story of the man who never saw his speech in print because the printing office did not have a sufficient supply of "E's" may or may not have been true, but it is morally certain that the speech of many of the human kind would be sadly handicapped if they should suddenly lose the power of uttering that word.

Usually it is the small mind which bubbles over with such light froth—and that is more wrong.

It is this capability of greater things which gives way to a foolish self love that makes us feel that somewhere the training has been wrong.

The innocent egotism of a child should be carefully guarded. Many a child is made a selfish egotist by unwise parents. It is very difficult to get the right perspective on your own child. You look through idealizing glasses. All the faults are diminished and almost obliterated, while the virtues and accomplishments are magnified.

Said a woman to me the other day: "It's surely hard to be so loved that your very faults look like to some one. Now I know I am a very ordinary looking woman, but my mother thinks me a beauty. She sees the inner person who loves her, and actually he goes down town with my hat on wrong side before the other day. It looked pretty to her when I wore it."

That woman is sweet and lovely, but she is unconsciously influenced by the atmosphere in which she lives, and thinks there is no opinion worth consulting save her own.

It isn't her fault that she is an egotist—it is the fault of the family who have treated her as a superior being. When a boy or girl does something a little better than the children with whom they associate it is not wise to make too great a blowing of trumpets about it. He may not repeat the act. It may be the one scintillation of the whole little life. Treat some things with a cool common sense, but do not, on the other hand, throw the obstacle of undisciplined criticism in the way of any ambitious child. It is a most difficult thing to do—to encourage a child and yet not over-praise him.

Truly parents must have the wisdom of the serpent and the gentleness of the dove, but some way save your child from the egotism which is death to progress and ambition.

When a man or woman reaches their limit of perfection according to their own point of view, they begin to decay mentally and morally, and there is no hope for them unless they waken in time.

The season of the moth is once more upon us. To the first keeper of fur it seems just yesterday that she heard that same remark. The care of clothing in the summer is one of the trials of the house mother. If the care and responsibility comes upon her.

Try—if you love your neighbor as yourself—to take out some scheme whereby the odorous and odious moth ball may be eliminated.

Off of cedar is said to be equally as efficacious and imparts a smell of hot summer days under the pine that is much more pleasant than the composite evil odors of the moth ball.

I strongly recommend the placing of clothes in bags made of newspaper. There is some virtue in printers ink other than the words it forms which seems to intimidate moths. One lady complained to me that she had done exactly as I told her, and that she gathered the fur from the inside of a long coat in long flakes. Now she did not do as I told her, for I said to comb and brush until all eggs and larvae were effectively removed, and then after a thorough sunning they would be safe if the bags were made without any holes. Either she neglected to do one or the other of these things. There is nothing that will work satisfactorily unless you take it to follow directions.

If you expect to have many tub dresses and have no blue lined skirt box in which to keep them fresh and white, have several long straight bags made of blue cotton cloth which has been well washed. In the bottom of the bag sew several tapes. These are to pin the skirts and waists to when the bag is hanging in the closet. They help to hold the articles out smoothly and the bag dropped over them prevents yellowing and soil from dust. Old sheets are sometimes utilized for making such protectors but the blue cotton is of greater service.

If the fruit jars which have been emptied during the winter have been cleaned and turned upside-down on the shelves as they accumulate the work of the coming season will be greatly simplified. The habit of some maids—and some mistresses—of nailing a little preserves to remain to harden in the bottom of a can is a pernicious one. Better throw the small bit to the pigs than throw it to the pigs than allow it to harden and sour. And such desperate remedies for the bits left over it not necessary—only as an alternative. Empty jars should be examined. Tops should be gone over and rubbers in sufficient quantities bought. Paraffin and all the little helps to this trying time may as well be purchased now as later. A few cans preserved at a time and the closet will be filled before you know it. Don't make too many preserves and heavy sweets, but can with small amounts of sugar and later the fruit may be used in a variety of ways.

The wise housekeeper begins early and cans when fruit is in its prime rather than wait till the end of the season for inferior fruit.

A Storekeeper Says:

"A lady came into my store lately and said: 'I have been using a New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove all winter in my apartment. I want one now for my summer home. I think these oil stoves are wonderful. If only women knew what a comfort they are, they would all have one. I spoke about my stove to a lot of my friends, and they were anxious to buy. They thought that there was small and smoke from an oil stove, and that it heated room just like any other stove. I told them of my experience, and one after another they got one, and now, not one of them would give here up for five times its cost.'"

Cautionary Note: Do not use this stove—see that the name—New Perfection—is on the front of the stove.

New Perfection WICK BLUE FLAME Oil Cook-stove

It has a Cabinet Top with a shelf for keeping plates and food hot. The nickel finish, with the bright blue of the chimneys, makes the stove ornamental and attractive. Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without a cabinet.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, June 9, 1870.—Jottings.—The residence of Alderman Rogers in the Second Ward, was last evening the theatre of one of the largest and most brilliant parties that has transpired in this city for many a day. In the company assembled there were represented the beauty, the wit, the talent, and the fashion of Janesville.

The house was brilliantly illuminated and the grounds were decorated with Chinese lanterns, while music lent its charms to the inspiring scene. So pleasantly did the hours slip away that the company took "no note of time," until after the fingers on the dial plate began to count the minutes of a new day. In all its features the party was a decided success.

Mr. Ellis Doty reached home yesterday. He is in quite feeble health but is gradually gaining.

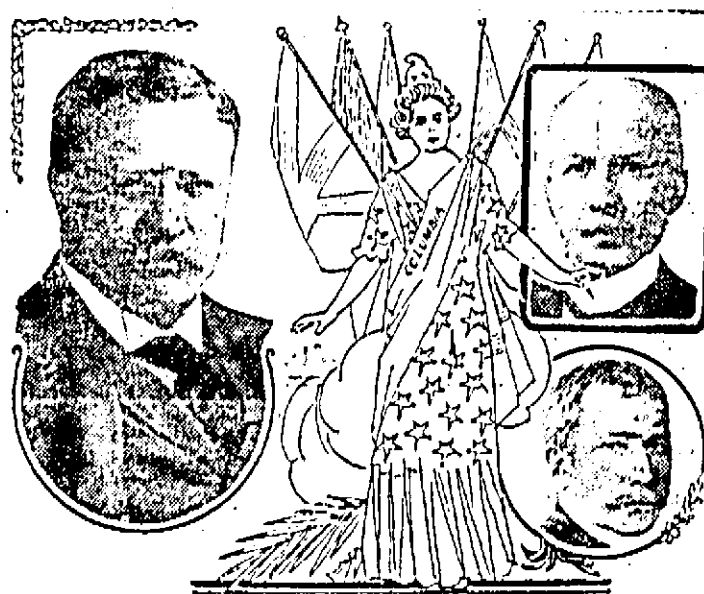

The friends of Mr. Walter Van Kirk who a short time since went with his wife to California from this city, will be pleased to learn that he has obtained a pleasant and lucrative position as paymaster in a navy yard, 110 miles south of San Francisco.

The net receipts of the Methodist church festival of the rink on Tuesday evening last was about eighty dollars.

Stoller is enlarging his grocery store and making some improvements which will tend to make it increasing by attractive.

Some little scuffling of a boy has happened in the back of two of the road gates in the Third Ward park, thus making it very difficult to turn the gates.

The funeral of Mrs. Josiah Wright takes place this afternoon at 5 o'clock from her late residence.

Roosevelt as chief justice of the committee foreign relation, and below, Senator Elihu Root, suggested as secretary of peace commission.

Col. Roosevelt. At upper right, Congressman D. F. Foster, chairman

Washington, D. C.—Events of the past year point definitely to the establishment of a permanent peace court to settle disputes of various powers under the direction of the United States, backed by the world powers.

The events of the last few months further point to Col. Theodore Roosevelt as the one logical man to head this court as virtually chief justice of the world. Senator Root is favorably considered as secretary of the court.

To further this, the house committee on foreign affairs favorably acted on a resolution proposing a special commission of five members to endeavor, by a mission abroad, to unite foreign nations in a common effort, first to limit navies, and second, by international agreement to constitute "The combined navies of the world as an international force for the preservation of universal peace."

Secretary Knox proposed last winter to seven powers, England, France, Germany, Russia, Austria-Hungary, Italy and Japan, a permanent arbitral court, each power to name two members like other courts, with a dock, rules and a recognized procedure, but to sit permanently, to be always ready to hear cases and to be or-

Congressman Foster, as chairman of this committee, is a dominant factor.

Secretary Knox proposed last winter to seven powers, England, France, Germany, Russia, Austria-Hungary, Italy and Japan, a permanent arbitral court, each power to name two members like other courts, with a dock, rules and a recognized procedure, but to sit permanently, to be always ready to hear cases and to be or-ted on foreign affairs favorably acted on a resolution proposing a special commission of five members to endeavor, by a mission abroad, to unite foreign nations in a common effort, first to limit navies, and second, by international agreement to constitute "The combined navies of the world as an international force for the preservation of universal peace."

There is plenty of room for debate, when nothing has yet been decided, but the certainty of a court, the certainty that President Taft would, if there were one, name Theodore Roosevelt as one of the two members from the United States, and the plain fact that he is the one man on which all the powers could unite for head of the court, the first "chief justice of the world."

This would be a life position. It would carry a salary commensurate with its importance, $10,000. What is of far more weight in dignity, in world-wide influence, in historic prestige and in genuine importance and actual power, nothing would match it.

Senator Elihu Root would be the natural choice for the second man from the United States for this court of permanent international arbitration. It is suggested that he might be its secretary. This is not probable but it is certain this court occupied the conference of Roosevelt and Root in London last year, more than "regular" and "insurgent."

Much on the court has yet to be settled. The smaller powers are certain to protest. Powers with great territorial possessions (like Holland, Belgium and Turkey are certain to protest. All South American will be bound in objection. The United States wishes no disorder. Perhaps in the end, a court of 15, selected by all the 46 powers, as was to be the admiralty court, with Theodore Roosevelt as its head may be the final solution.

Great Wisconsin Land Opening

150,000 Acres in Sawyer County, Wisconsin, Released for Settlement.

$8.50 to $20 Per Acre and Easy Terms.

Yielding to the urgent and increasing demands of homesteaders, the lumber interests have at last released for settlement an enormous acreage of rich undeveloped land in the heart of Wisconsin's great dairy and big crop-producing section. The American Immigration Company of Chicago, Falls, Wis., has secured this great body of land and is offering remarkable inducements to settlers and investors. The land is equal in productive power to land that commands $100 to $150 per acre in Iowa, Illinois, Indiana or Ohio. The company is selling off the land at the remarkably low valuation of $8.50 to $20 per acre.

The terms are one-fourth to one-third cash and the balance in ten years.

This is an opportunity unparalleled in recent years. A man with a few hundred dollars and a determination to win can get one of these splendid farms and be independent in a few years. There is timber to be cleared away, but much of it is valuable hardwood, which can be turned into money at the nearby sawmills.

The farmer can draw no more to pay for the land and provide timber for farm buildings and fences.

Settlers in the Round Lake Country have the advantage of good markets, railroad facilities, telephone and mail service, schools, churches and good neighbors. It is a country of abundant rainfall, and the driest of water.

Hundreds are bound for the Round Lake Country, Sawyer County, determined to get a fresh start in a new country where every man has a "ground floor opportunity."

Free books, maps and full information regarding the great development plans now under way, can be secured by addressing the local representative of the American Immigration Company.

COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS' MEET.

United Association Assembled at Manhattan Beach Hotel, New York.

New York, June 8.—The United Commercial Travelers' association, the only secret fraternity in the world composed of one craft of men, and which has a membership of about 60,000, began its annual meeting today at the Manhattan Beach hotel. The sessions will last four days, and a great crowd of delegates has come to attend them. "Prosperity" is the slogan of the association, and it will emphasize this in two big events. The first will be a prosperity banquet tomorrow evening in the two acre dining room of the hotel, when many well known men will make speeches. The biggest event will be "The Grand Prosperity Ratification Parade" on Saturday. Early in the morning the delegates will be transported from Manhattan beach steamboats to the Battery, where they will form, joining delegates arriving by special trains from every state in the Union. The managers predict that it will be the finest parade since the McKinley outpouring for honest money.

HALF A CHANCE

By Frederic S. Isham.

Author of "The Strollers," "Under the Rose," "The Lady of the Mount," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY THE BOBBES-MERRILL COMPANY

"Very well," he said, and was about to give the coin to the man and walk away when another thought held him. This fellow had been a lunk in a certain chain of events. The temptation grew to linger with him, the single, tangible, though paltry and needless figure in the drama he could lay hands on. John Steele looked around. In a byway he saw the lighted window of a cheap oyster buffet. Motioning to the man, he wheeled abruptly and started for it.

A few minutes later found them seated in the shabby back room. A number of faded sporting pictures adorned the wall. One—how John Steele started!—showed the Frisco Pet in a favorite attitude.

Steele spoke now. His dark eyes alone strangely. A sardonic expression lurked there. The proprietor could bring his companion a steak if he had one. Large or small? Large, with an original smile.

The proprietor hesitated out.

A voice, hoarse, that of a man, was heard:

"The blatted fog is coming down fast."

The smaller man drew back. A shiver seemed to run over him. "They are a long while about the steak," he murmured.

"Your testimony helped to send him over the water, I believe," said Steele, pointing out the picture of the Frisco Pet to Dandy Joe.

"How do you—? I ain't on the stand now, Mr. Steele?" A spark of defiance momentarily came into Dandy Joe's eyes.

"No, no!" John Steele leaned back. "The harm's been done so far as you are concerned. You are a factor have disappeared from the case."

"Glad to hear you say so, Mr. Steele. I mean," the other's voice was uncertain, cautious, "that's a matter long since dead and done with. But as for my testimony helping to send him over the water?"

"Or under?" sotto voce.

Joe swallowed. "It was true, every word of it."

"Good!" John Steele spoke almost listlessly. "Always stick by any one who sticks to you, whether a friend or a pal or a patron."

"A patron?" From the other's lips fell an oath.

"But even if there had been something not quite strictly in accord—what there wasn't—quickly—a man couldn't gaily what had been said."

Dandy Joe began.

"He could," indifferently.

"But that would be?"

"Confessing to perjury? Yes."

"Hold on, Mr. Steele!" The man's eyes began to shine with alarm. "I'm not on the—"

"I know. And it wouldn't do any good if you were."

"You mean?"—in spite of himself the fellow's tones wavered—"because he's under the water?"

"No; I had in mind that even if he hadn't been drowned, your—"

"Well! Hadden!"

"That," said John Steele, "doesn't matter. The principal subject of any consequence relating to you is the steak, which is now coming." As he spoke he rose, leaving Dandy Joe alone at the table.

For a time he did not speak, sitting before a cheerless face that feebly attempted to assert itself.

Once when the proprietor stepped in the asked, without looking around, for a certain number of grains of quinine with a glass of water—they probably kept it at the bar. Yes; the man always had it on hand and brought it in.

By this time Dandy Joe had pushed back his chair. His dull eyes glowered with satisfaction, also perhaps a little calculation. He was thinking. A certain matter in which self interest played no small part had come to mind. Joe regarded him covertly.

"Asking your pardon for referring to it—but you've helped so many a poor chap—there's an old pal of mine who is down on his luck, and he was asking of me for a good lawyer who could give him a straight talk."

"I am not at present!" Steele experienced a sense of grim humor—"looking for new clients."

"Well, I thought I'd be mentioning the matter, sir. You see, he's been out of old England for a long time and was going away again, when what should he suddenly hear but that his old woman that was died and left a few hundred pounds or so—enough to start a nice little pub for him and me to run—only it's in the hands of a trustee, who is waiting for him to appear and claim it."

"You say he has been out of England?" John Steele stopped. "How long?"

"A good many years. There was one or two little matters again him when he left home, so he wanted to see a lawyer and find out in any case, how he could get his money without."

"The law getting hold of him. What's his name?"

"Tom Rogers."

"The blood surged to Steele's temples. 'You can give me this Tom Rogers' address,' He could barely control his voice in his agitation."

"I, sir—you see, I can't quite do that, for Tom's laying low, you understand. But if you would let him call around quiet-like on you?"

"On me?" Steele spoke slowly. "I hardly think the case will prove sufficiently attractive." The proprietor stepped in. Steele took the change that was laid on the table, leaving a half crown, which he indicated that Dandy Joe could appropriate.

"Better not think of going now, sir," the proprietor said to John Steele. "Never saw anything like it the way the fog has thickened."

Dandy Joe stepped toward the door. "I'm going to have a try."

John Steele waited a moment, then with a perfunctory nod walked quietly to the front door. He looked in the direction his late companion had turned. His figure was just discernible. In a moment it would have been swallowed by the fog, when quickly John Steele walked after him.

CHAPTER XIV.
THROUGH THE FOG.

THE dense veil overhanging the city, while favorable to John Steele in some respects, lessening for the time his own danger, made more difficult the task to which he now set himself. He dared not too closely approach the figure before him lest he should be seen and his purpose, divulged. Once or twice Dandy Joe looked around, more perhaps from habit than any suspicion that he was followed.

At a crossing, where opposing currents had met and become congested, utter confusion reigned. From the masses of vehicles of all kinds, constituting a seemingly inextricable blockade, arose the din of hoarse voices.

Joe essayed to cross. By dint of dodging and darting between restless horses he reached the other side. A sudden closing in of cars and carriages midway between curbs held John Steele back. He caught quickly at the bridle of the nearest horse and forced it aside. An exasperated shout, a half scream from somewhere, greeted the action. A whip snapped, stung his cheek.

"Turn back. Get out of this something, eh?" He heard familiar tones, saw the speaker, Sir Charles, and, by his side—yes, through the curtain of fog, so near he could almost reach out and touch her, he saw as in a flash Jocelyn Wray!

She, too, saw him, the man in the street, his pale face lighted up ghost-like from the mist. A cry fell from her lips, was lost amid other sounds. An instant eyes looked into eyes, her dilated, his unutterably bright, burning! Something struck him—a wheel. He half fell, recovered himself, managed to reach the curb.

Dandy Joe had disappeared. The hope of attaining his end through him, of being led to the retreat of one he had so long desired to find, had proved illusory.

John Steele did not go far in mere aimless fashion, leaning against a wall, he strove once more to plan, but ever as he did so through his thought the girl's fair face, looking out from enshrouding fogs, intruded.

He forgot his purpose, when a figure coming out of a public house through one of the doors near which he had halted caught his attention. Dandy Joe, a prodigal with unexpected riches, wiped his lips as he snatched past John Steele and continued his way, lurching a little.

For a time they two seemed the only pedestrians that had ventured forth that night in a locality so uninviting. Through the gulchlike passages swept a cold draft of air. It made little rifts in the fog and showed an entrance—a dim light. At the same time the sound of the footsteps in front abruptly ceased.

For a few minutes Steele waited. He looked toward the place Dandy Joe had entered. It was well known to him and, what seemed more important, to Mr. Elliott. The latter would remember it in connection with the Frisco Pet and presumably turn to it as a likely spot to search for him who had been forced to leave Captain Forry's house. That contingency—nay, probability—had to be considered. The one person he most needed to find had taken refuge in one of the places he would have preferred not to enter. But no time must be lost hesitating. It had to be chosen. Dismissing all thought of danger from without, thinking only of what lay before him, within, he moved quickly forward and tried the door. He entered, felt his way in the darkness through winding passages downward, avoiding a bad step—he remembered even that!

How paltry details stood out! The earthen floor still drowned the sound of footsteps. The narrow hall took the same turns.

A shaft of light like a sword, from the crack of a door, glamed on the dark floor before him. He stepped toward it. The low sound of men's tones could be heard—Jack's, a strange voice, no, a familiar one, that caused the listener's every fiber to vibrate.

"And what did you say when he pumped you for the case?"

"That you would rather call on him."

"And then he cared tonight for the job? You're sure?" anxiously—"he wasn't playing to find out?"

The other answered loosely and walked away. A door closed behind him. For a time the stillness remained unbroken. Then a low rattle, as of dice on a table, caused John Steele to glance through a crevice. What he saw seemed to decide him to act quickly. He lifted a latch and stepped in. As he did so a huge man with red hair sprang to his feet. From one great hand the dice fell to the floor. His shaggy jaw dropped. Casting over his shoulder the swift glance of an entrapped animal, he seemed about to leap backward to escape by a rear entrance when the voice of the intruder arrested his purpose, momentarily held him.

"Oh, I'm alone! There are no police outside." He spoke in the dialect of the pickpocket and magnum. To prove it, John Steele stooped and locked the door.

The small bloodshot eyes lighted with wonder. The heavy brutish jaws began to harden. "Alone?"

The other tossed the key. It fell at the man's feet. John Steele walked over to the opposite door and shot a heavy bolt there. "Looks as if it would hold," he said in thieves' argot as he turned around.

"Are ye a gaby?" The red headed giant stared ominously at him.

"On the contrary," coolly, "I know very well what I am doing."

A question interlarded with oaths burst from the other's throat. John Steele regarded the man quietly. "I should think it apparent what I want!" he answered. As he spoke he sat down. "It is you," bending his bright, resolute eyes on the other.

"And you're come alone?" He drew up his ponderous form.

John Steele smiled. "I assure you I welcomed the opportunity."

"Do you know what I am going to do to you?"

"I haven't any curiosity," still clinging to thieves' jargon or St. Giles Greek. "But I'm sure you won't play me the trick you did the last time I saw you."

The fellow shot his head near. "You're the swell core who wanted to pulverize that night when?"

"You tried to rob me," John Steele laughed. "Do you know the penalty for attempting that game, Tom Rogers, alias 'Tom-o-the-land, alias'?"

The man fell back. "Who are you? By—?" he said.

"John Steele."

"John Steele!" The bloodshot eyes became slightly vacuous. "The—? Then you used him?" Indicating vaguely, the entrance at the back, "for a duck to uncork? I'll burke you for that!"

CABINET MEMBERS TO MEET COL. ROOSEVELT

Capt. Butt Will Deliver Message From Taft to Returning Hunter at New York.

Washington, June 8.—Capt. A. W. Butt, the president's aid, will deliver a letter of welcome from President Taft to Col. Theodore Roosevelt on a government revenue cutter in New York harbor.

In the meantime President Taft will be rolling westward on a Pullman car to Villa Nova, Pa., where St. Thomas college will give him a degree.

In addition to Captain Butt two other members of the president's official family, Secretary of the Navy Meyer and Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, will go to New York to greet Mr. Roosevelt. The three officials were members of Roosevelt's official family.

The letter to the former president will be a formal message of welcome. It will have no political significance. The surprise that Mr. Taft would not go to New York was not genuine, because no one expected him to do so.

Captain Butt and the Taft letter will go down the bay to meet Mr. Roosevelt on the same cutter which will convey Collector Loeb and the reception committee.

Explanations.

It never does take a man long to explain when he is right or thinks he is right. It is when a man goes wrong that great long explanations are needed.

That there will be a hurry-up adjournment, probably July 1, no one now doubts. Nevertheless Senator La Follette and some of his friends declare that they will throw themselves squarely across adjournment at any time if they are robbed in the conference of the fruits of amendments they have fought into the railroad bill. In order to "light it out all summer" the adherents of Mr. La Follette would have to report to the time-honored expedient of a filibuster on a talk against time.

The railroad bill was taken up by the house and senate conference today.

Senator Elkins and Mr. Mann of the house have assured President Taft that the conference would not long delay reaching an agreement on the bill.

Bill Must Be Effective.

President Taft told the conference who called on him that he would insist on an effective railroad bill. He suggested that the bill be changed so as to provide that it shall go into effect immediately on passage; that the time for suspension of rates pending investigation by the interstate commerce commission be limited to five or six months; and that the bill carry some provision giving the interstate commerce commission authority over new capitalization by railroads.

The president said he was not wedded to the capitalization clauses of the house bill, but thought the idea of a good one and should be embodied in the bill. He wants the new law to go into effect immediately to prevent the railroads from filing new schedules on passage of the bill to become effective in thirty days.

The only suggestion of the president the railroads are expected to oppose is that with reference to control over new capitalization by the interstate commerce commission.

Desires Early Adjournment.

After he had outlined his ideas as to a good railroad bill, the president told his visitors he was desirous that congress complete its work at an early date and adjourn. Then he summoned Republican House Whip Dwight and requested him to use his influence to put the house in shape for closing up until next December.

Egotistical.

"When a husband declares that his wife made him what he is," remarked the man on the car, "he imagines he is paying her a great compliment."

"I have suffered with piles for thirty-six years. One year ago last April I began taking Cascades for constipation. In the course of a week I noticed the piles began to disappear and at the end of six weeks they did not trouble me at all. Cascades have done wonders for me. I am entirely cured and feel like a new man." George Kryder, Napoleon, O.

TAFT WISHES AN EARLY SETTLEMENT

TELLS LEADERS IN CONGRESS HE IS DESIROUS OF EARLY ADJOURNMENT.

INSURGENTS MAY FILIBUSTER

President Would Reduce Time Limit on Rate Settlement to Five or Six Months—Will Insist on Effective Railroad Bill.

Washington, June 8.—President Taft gave orders which show that he will keep faith with the railroads and have the question of their rates of rates settled most expeditiously by the interstate commerce commission. In sympathetic movement with the president's intentions, it was estimated by the interstate commerce commission that the main question in dispute between the government and the railroads could be disposed of by the end of October or the early part of November.

The president testified to his desire for an early settlement with the railroads by telling Messrs. Aldrich, Elkins and Mann, who called upon him, that the time limit of eleven months as per the bills in congress for adjudication of rates by the interstate commerce commission might well be reduced to five or six months.

EVERY present in our stock can be bought as cheap for cash as you would be able to buy it at any other merchant, and they are for sale at cash prices, but we have them principally to give to our customers on the Profit Sharing plan of ours. You will find hand painted china, Haviland china, fine porcelain ware, dresser china, etc., as well as enamel ware and kitchen utensils of all kinds. Every premium in stock is a "first" quality, not a "second" or imperfectly manufactured article.

And all these are given in exchange for premium tickets which we give with each purchase. Each ticket represents a value of about 2c in redeeming it for premiums. With a pound of Golden Blend we give two tickets. Most women accumulate about 8c to 12c worth of tickets, per week and in the course of a year they have a quite a considerable amount with which to get presents.

And mind you, these tickets are given free, without the slightest cost to you. We guarantee that you will find no 25c coffee in Janesville equal to Golden Blend. Women all over the city tell us it is as good as many 30c and 35c grades. Our other goods, such as teas, spices, chocolate, cocon, flavoring extracts etc. are of equal quality.

Next time you are down town drop into the store and let us show you our line of premiums. If you are buying you will do as well here, or better; then elsewhere, and if you save our tickets then you get the premiums without cost.

We would like to have an opportunity to explain the plan in detail. If its not convenient to call, drop us a card, or phone, and we will call at your home.
